DESCRIPTION

PCB Magazine is the magazine that speaks to the world of electronics production, illustrating and examining topics ranging from the design of assembled systems to the preparation phase for production, from technologies and solutions for assembly to testing and management tools for the finished product. The magazine is aimed at system designers and end users of complex machines and lines for electronics processing and the world of companies that work for third parties. The topics covered range from consumables to production systems, from new technologies to quality control systems used in the world of electronics production. Every year, on the occasion of international trade fairs, one or more issues of the magazine are packaged in a bilingual format to facilitate the visibility of Italian companies on foreign markets.

READERS

Designers and assemblers belonging to the world of Odm and Ems, users, producers and/or distributors of production and/or assembly systems, masters, technical offices for hardware and software design, process engineers, producers and users of Ate and Aoi systems and purchasing offices of the electronics supply chain.

web

SITE

Elettronicanews.it is the professional electronics site, a daily updated service that allows the user to stay up to date with the latest market news in the electronics sector, as well as constantly providing technological, economic and current affairs insights.

Online support of the two paper electronics magazines (Selezione di Elettronica and PCB Magazine), elettronicanews.it covers all topics in the electronics world, from design to production of complex devices, from testing to distribution of electronic material. The site hosts written and audio-video contributions and reports of internal and external events to the publishing group, such as trade fairs and thematic conferences.
